

Children are honored and loved at Full Devotion-FBC Canton

If children are truly honored and loved, then that would imply several things...

If we honor and love children, then we will make them feel welcomed, accepted, and loved.

If we honor and love children, then we will do our best for them. Our programs will have excellence. Our materials will be the best we are able to provide. Our rooms will be safe and clean because we honor and love them and hold them in high esteem.

If we honor and love children, then we will meet them at their particular developmental level. We will not try to make them be little adults or little youths. No, they will be met where they are, just as Jesus meets us.

If we honor and love children, then we want to have the best people we can to minister to them, so we screen our volunteers, we train our volunteers, and we nurture our volunteers. Why? Because we honor and love the volunteers, as well as the children with whom they work.

If we honor and love children, then we will purposefully introduce them to their Creator God and to His Son, Jesus Christ. We will gently help them see their need for a Savior, and will help them grow closer to Jesus.

Since children are truly honored and loved, then these are the things we will do.
